The list of the killed and wounded in this wide spread action will not be found proportionate to the numbers engaged on either side, and to the duration of the conflict...

Nine-tenths of our killed and wounded were performed at either end, and as the enemy retains possession of the ground, we can get no accurate details of our losses...

The disastrous result of the action was perhaps inevitable—even though no panic had occurred at the close from the three causes against which the noblest soldier can never successfully oppose their daring...

CONCORD, N. H., AUGUST 1, 1861.

Barbarism of the Chivalry.

In our columns of War News, will be found an account of the more than Sepoy barbarities inflicted upon the dead and wounded soldiers of the Union Army at the battle of Bull Run, by the chivalric Rebels...

Of COURSE.

The Patriot, which takes up most of its room, this week, in abusing Mr. Lincoln and his Cabinet, has a little variety in the way of defending somebody—and that somebody is Gen. Patterson...

EVERETT'S ORATION.

An oration by Hon. Edward Everett, delivered at the New York Academy of Music, July 4, 1861, bound in pamphlet form of 48 pages for sale by E. S. C. Eastman. Price 15 cents.

The Lesson of the Hour.

The past week has been one of great military activity on the part of our Government. The three months men have been returning home, but three years men have more than filled the vacant places in the Grand Army of the Union—and still they come.

Though the result of the battle of July 21st has been to encourage the rebels somewhat, yet it will ultimately benefit the Union cause. It will make the enemy more arrogant and vainglorious; it will render the Federal movements more circumspect and effective.

The disastrous result of the action was perhaps inevitable—even though no panic had occurred at the close from the three causes against which the noblest soldier can never successfully oppose their daring.

The telegraph, bearing the exaggerated reports of the most panic-stricken runaways, who could not only run the fastest, but could tell the biggest stories, frightened the people, and it has been hard for truth that is less fact than falsehood, to reassure the public mind.

FIELD OFFICERS OF THIRD N. H. REGIMENT.

The following gentlemen have been nominated as Field Officers of the 3d N. H. Regiment: JAMES FEARING JR., Manchester; HAWKES JACKSON, Portsmouth; JOHN B. BELL, Bath; MAJOR JOHN M. BELL, Bath; MAJOR JOHN M. BELL, Bath; MAJOR JOHN M. BELL, Bath.

LIST OF KILLED, WOUNDED AND MISSING OF THE 3d N. H. REGIMENT.

Dr. George H. Hubbard, Surgeon of the Second N. H. Regiment, furnishes to the Manchester Herald the following list of killed, wounded and missing of that Regiment. He writes under date of July 27th:

General Butler, of the United States Army, has been severely contused for having given the command to General Pierce, the Ex-President. Although having served in the Mexican War, he is not considered an able commander.

THE ABOVE CHOICE BIT OF INTELLIGENCE FROM A VIRGINIA CORRESPONDENT.

The Richmond (Va.) "special correspondent" of the London Standard, writing under date of July 17th, says: "General Butler, of the United States Army, has been severely contused for having given the command to General Pierce, the Ex-President."

SHARP SHOOTERS.

A proposition having been made by H. Berdan, Esq., to the War Department, to raise a corps of Rifle Sharpshooters, to be selected from the best rifle shots in the loyal States in the Union, the proposition was accepted by the Secretary of War, June 15, 1861.

The Traitor's Aids.

The N. H. Patriot is making a great ado over the battle of Bull Run. That paper, which is "battered on the Democratic members of the recent Legislature to act the part of traitors in aiding any appropriation to aid in the defence of the country; that paper, which, at the very outset, advised no Democrats to enlist in the army of the Union; that paper, that has over and over again expressed its desire that our Republic should be sold out, by "any compromise," to Jeff Davis and his fellow-traitors; that paper which harbors about it, and takes into its counsels a set of low-minded, traitorous scoundrels, who, upon the arrival of the first exaggerated accounts of the retreat of our forces from Bull Run expressed their Satanic joy thereat in various ways...

But granting, for the sake of argument, what is not proved, that Mr. Lincoln did desire and urge the forward movement of the army, is he to be held responsible for all misdeeds attending the movement? Is he to be held responsible for a "panic" that changed a noble victory into a defeat? Is he to be held responsible for the neglect of the officer in command of the reserve, to bring that reserve up at the proper time? Is he to be held responsible for the neglect, culpable, if not treasonable, of Gen. Patterson, to prevent the junction of Johnston's forces with the main rebel army near Manassas?

On Tuesday evening, the lecture before the Theological Society was delivered by Rev. Dr. Pease, President of the Vermont University at Burlington. His subject was Christianity—what it proposes—the method, and its results.

The church at this time was filled to its utmost capacity, not a place apparently for another. It was known that Edward Everett was to speak, and that a sufficient notice to fill any building in New England. It matters not what his subject may be, he never speaks, but eloquently. As soon as the Poem was concluded Mr. Everett was conducted to the stage amid loud applause.

COMMENCEMENT AT DARTMOUTH.

We, in company with many others, started on Tuesday, the 23d inst., to spend a few days with our Alma Mater. We arrived, after a pleasant ride over the Northern and Passumpsic Railroads, at the Norwich station, early in the afternoon. Here we were met as is usual on such days, by a crowd of teamsters who were more eager for the "quarters" than for the comfort of the passengers.

THE SECOND N. H. REGIMENT.

On Wednesday, the 3d inst., the division of the regiment under Col. Tappan marched up the river to the mouth of the Monocacy. The regiment, under the command of Whipple, marched up to Conrad, four miles, when the whole division proceeded to Monocacy, joining Col. Tappan's division and uniting the entire regiment again, when we moved to Point of Rocks, six miles, by the low-path of the canal, with the exception of a detachment of ten men each by the highway, who went as guard to the train by the highway, a distance of eighteen miles, making the march more than half the regiment some sixteen miles.

LETTER FROM 1st N. H. REGIMENT.

Dear Friends—I am just recovered from my fatigue after the late New York campaign, and writing a connected account of what I have done and seen; but if I were to picture the scenes fully and accurately, the recital would fill a volume. We started Tuesday at 10 o'clock P. M. and marched into the "Old Dominion" after a march of about 10 miles we camped upon the ground; and on the next morning, proceeding on our march, we marched about 10 miles more to Fairfax, which had been evacuated about two hours before we had cleared the road of trees and stumps placed to blockade it, and passed some formidable fortifications, also deserted.
